Suit Up, Feel Great

From bloggers' beach confidence tricks to suits perfect for your body, everything you need to strut in the sand is right here...

In a
Victoria's Secret
one-piece.

“More coverage means I feel more comfortable. I like how this one-piece isn't too revealing, but has wide stripes that still emphasize my body.”

In a Sorella one-piece.

“It isn't always easy to love your body on the beach. My trick: Create a head-to-toe look. Accessorizing makes it not just about the suit—I go for a whole beach goddess vibe.”

Kristine Thompson Check out her blog

In an American Apparel bikini.

“When I need inspo, I look at retro pin-up girls. They weren't afraid to embrace their curves—and neither am I! This high-waisted suit helps me do just that.”

SWIMSUIT SHOPPING SECRETS

Robyn Lawley, smokin' plus model and swimwear designer, dishes on finding your suit soulmate

1. Focus on your fave features
"Choose what you want to highlight and make that the goal. I love belted suits and high-waisted styles—they define your shape."

2. Stay true to you
"Your beach style should be an extension of your everyday vibe. You'll feel more confident that way. Don't feel like you have to wear black if your usual look is colorful."

3. Ignore the tag
"I know it's hard, but don't get hung up on size. As a designer, I can tell you it means nothing. A smooth, fluid silhouette is everything."

4. Find the right light
"Fitting room lighting is almost always terrible. Your best bet? Take the suit home and try it on in natural light. If you still don't like it, just return it."

5. Put it to the test
"With tops, you should feel as supported as you do in a great bra. If you can't jog comfortably on the spot, go up or down a size. Move around in the bottoms and make sure they aren't digging in or creating bumps."
